Portuguese-inspired worldmusic

The music group "Extravagante" is one of the few Portuguese music groups in Germany; it brings to its audience well-known Portuguese music as well as original compositions with a Portuguese touch.

The majority of the musical program involves guitarist and singer Daniel Pircher's compositions, which integrate Portuguese music with various influences from Russia, Cabo Verde and the Balkans. The accompanying cello arrangements by Benjamin Walbrodt further lend these compositions an occasional Argentinian flair or echo of classical music.

The songs tell a story of letting oneself drift about in yearning in an ocean of unbridled passion, of loss and hope, of the meandering of love between dream and reality and of the hope and the strength which love grants us.

The musical impact of these themes is in turns melancholy, ironic, lightly abstract or (as the band prefers) wild and passionate.
